

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

Semiconductor devices that utilize a silicon-containing dielectric layer are disclosed. In one embodiment, a silicon-containing material is deposited on a substrate. The deposited material is processed with a reactive agent to react with silicon atoms of the deposited material to form the dielectric layer. The silicon-containing dielectric layer provides for improved or smaller semiconductor devices by reducing leakage and increasing the dielectric constant.